

A MODEL PRISONER

JAMES CASEBERE

Ben Lifson

James Casebere is a photographer in the documentary style. His subject is architecture, but instead of visiting buildings that fascinate him he builds and photographs models of them. His most recent work is about prisons. He has studied the subject thoroughly, and in conversation gives the impression that in his models—with their regular façades, the cell blocks with their enormous

